

7 Day Gratitude Challenge To Skyrocket Your Health Goals

flexfusionstudios.com

What is gratitude? As kids, we get taught to thank others when they give us a gift or make a nice gesture.

We learn to thank naturally as a social standard. But how frequently do we communicate gratitude for small daily good things? Do we truly understand what it means to be grateful? How often do we express "thank you" without truthfully feeling thankful?

Gratitude is a conscious, positive emotion expressed when we're grateful for something tangible or intangible.

Gratitude entails far more than merely being polite. It's a practice that entails recognising someone else's gesture towards us or the good things in our lives. It involves both the process of identifying the positive and its outcome.

A close-up photograph of a young Black man with short hair, smiling broadly and showing his teeth. He is wearing a dark-colored t-shirt. The background is a soft, out-of-focus light grey or white, suggesting an outdoor setting. The image is partially obscured by a white text box on the left side.

Gratitude is vital for psychological well-being and personal growth.

Regular expressions of gratitude result in increased happiness and reports of greater life satisfaction, meaningfulness, and productivity.

Dopamine (a chemical released in the brain that makes you feel good) is unleashed in the brain when someone expresses or receives gratitude.

Dopamine gets produced in two brain regions: the substantia nigra and the ventral tegmental area.

The former is concerned with movement and speech, while the latter is concerned with reward. Dopamine is released when a person expresses or receives gratitude, creating a link between the behaviour and feeling good. The more a person expresses gratitude, the more dopamine is released.

When expressed regularly, gratitude is a powerful emotion with numerous positive consequences:

- > increased happiness,
- > positive mood,
- > more satisfaction with life,
- > less materialistic,
- > less likely to experience burnout,
- > better physical health,
- > better sleep,
- > less fatigue,
- > lower levels of cellular inflammation,
- > greater resiliency,
- > encourages the development of patience, humility, and wisdom.

Expressing gratitude is a simple, quick, and inexpensive everyday intervention that can help reach your nutrition, fitness and wellness goals.

References:

Mills PJ, Redwine L, Wilson K, Pung MA, Chinh K, Greenberg BH, Lunde O, Maisel A, Raisinghani A, Wood A, Chopra D. The Role of Gratitude in Spiritual Well-being in Asymptomatic Heart Failure Patients. Spiritual Clin Pract (Wash D C). 2015 Mar;2(1):5-17. doi: 10.1037/scp0000050. PMID: 26203459; PMCID: PMC4507265.

Try this 7 day gratitude challenge following three daily prompts.

It's simple: write down three positive things from your day, big or small, like conquering your deadlift personal best, learning a new delicious breakfast recipe, or finding joy in hanging out with that person who makes you laugh.

After completing this activity for seven days, try to continue without the aid of prompts.

(Print the challenge or edit on your device. If you are using a journal, write down the question and then your answer in your journal.)

Gratitude Challenge: Day 1

One good thing that happened to me today...

Something good that I saw someone do...

Today I had fun when...

Gratitude Challenge: Day 2

Something I accomplished today...

Something funny that happened today...

Someone I was thankful for today...

Gratitude Challenge: Day 3

Something I was thankful for today...

Today I smiled when...

Something about today I'll always want to remember...

Gratitude Challenge: Day 4

One good thing that happened to me today...

Today was special because...

Today I was proud of myself because...

Gratitude Challenge: Day 5

Something interesting that happened today...

Someone I was thankful for today...

Today I had fun when...

Gratitude Challenge: Day 6

Something about today I'll always want to remember...

Something funny that happened today...

My favourite part of today...

Gratitude Challenge: Day 7

Something I was happy about today...

Something good I saw someone do today...

Something I did well today...
